Hi Lisa and Jim -

Great party last night - thanks again for having me!

I wanted to introduce you to Alejandro Cohen with Dublab - the world's oldest internet radio, and also a non-profit. They were recently awarded an FM radio license and are looking for a building on which to locate their tower. The tower is actually not that large - it wouldn't be much of an imposition, and they are willing to pay a monthly rental rate for the use of the space. The primary building they are interested in is Iron Mountain on Highland. I'm not sure if anyone from my time at the Media District is still working there. I'm going to check and see if Jeff Anthony is still there, but let me know if you're aware who the contact is there now.

I had also mentioned the storage building at Santa Monica and Cahuenga, but Alejandro hasn't had a chance to check that out yet to see if it's plausible.

This would be a great partnership for the Media District since Dublab is a local, non-profit radio station, and is affiliated with several other local non-profits.

Let me know if you have any other questions, but Alejandro should be able to address them better than I could.

Thanks!
